Managing the recovery - employment law in 2010.

Recent economic conditions have resulted in a substantial increase in employment tribunal litigation brought by disgruntled ex-employees. How can businesses reduce litigation risk if there is a need to make redundancies, and how can they restructure their employee profile to avoid legal claims?

At the same time, central government continues with a heavy programme of regulation in employment law. What are the key changes to look out for in 2010? Is your business fighting fit for a recovery?

This briefing will be delivered by Fergus McCombie, a barrister at St Albans Chambers with 10 years' experience in employment law. His clients include local businesses and multinational corporations.
